PREFACE

The "Morgan Hill" earthquake (M_L6.2) occurred at 1:15 PST on 24 April, 1984, the consequence of sudden rupture along a 30-kilometer segment of the historically active Calaveras fault. This moderate earthquake:

- Was the third damaging earthquake (M ~ 6) to strike the San Francisco Bay region since 1979 and the largest event in the region since 1911.
- Caused damage estimated at $8 million, but no loss of life or serious injury.
- Produced many significant records of ground and structural shaking, including an unprecedented 1.3g horizontal acceleration.
- Produced no evidence of premonitory activity and little, if any, surface rupture.
- Evidenced directivity of earthquake energy release (focusing).

It was immediately apparent that subsequent studies of this earthquake would add significantly to our understanding of various earthquake related concerns. These include the response of modern structures to earthquake motion, the efficacy of building codes, the effects of local geology and topography on seismic motion, the extent to which the source rupture may focus energy, the pattern of seismicity in the region, and the adequacy of emergency response procedures.

In undertaking this publication, our intention was to encourage timely and formal documentation of the observations and conclusions of the principal investigators, information that, in some cases, might be generally unavailable or undocumented and lost to future investigators. Significant earthquakes are relatively infrequent and, generally, very costly learning experiences. It is essential that the knowledge gained and lessons learned be recorded and communicated.

The 24 papers compiled in this publication represent the efforts of some 56 investigators representing 21 organizations. Included among the authors are engineers, scientists, emergency-response officials and others in government, the universities, utilities, and consulting firms. The papers are presented in four sections: earthquake damage, emergency response, geologic and geophysical investigations, and seismological investigations.

On behalf of the Division of Mines and Geology, we express our appreciation for the efforts put forth by these contributors and our satisfaction in making this publication available. Appreciation is due Brian Tucker, under whose direction this report was prepared and to M. Smith, J. Tambert, C. Owens, and E. Foster for attending to the publication process. Cora Pingree provided invaluable assistance in word processing.
